Good News For Homemakers

Talk to Your Children And Raise A Wise Consumer

Parents who want their children to be wise adult consumers should start by helping them to cope with television advertisements today. Dr. Glenn Mitchell, Extension Specialist, Consumer Education, VPI and SU, has shared some interesting facts with us that I will be passing on to you. Much can be gained by direct communication on what is being said and done on television.

Frequently children don't understand the purpose of television commercials even though the children themselves are the key and profitable portion of the consumer audience. Many commercials are designed especially for appealing to your children.

Parents can help their children by supervising what it is watched on T.V. and by talking to their children about the content. Parents can help children understand what is a commerical, what is entertainment and what is a documentary program.

Children watch television an average of 23.5 hours weekly according to Ohio State University researcher, Ellen Wartella. By the time average youngsters graduate from high school, they will have watched 22,000 hours of television and been exposed to over 200,000 commercials. At that age they will be more skeptical and discriminating about ads.

How children regard the television ad and what effect they have is an important concern for parents and researchers, as well as the public.

Television has a great potential in communicating with the public, but like any mass media, it does not discriminate as to receivers and their comprehension or limitations. Some people feel that television has much potential, but its greatest value may be when it is combined with means of obtaining direct feedback from viewers so that consumers can literally vote and express their opinions.

Many companies try all types of advertising gimmicks to appeal to children so they can sell a product. How many of you have had your child ask for a particular cereal product or particular snack product because they have seen it advertised on T.V.?

Parents need to help their children understand what they are watching. Please help them understand that advertising companies are trying to sell products and make a profit. This is why our children need our help as parents if they are to grow up to be a wise consumer.

If you have a homemaking question or problem, you may call the Appomattox County Extension Office at 352-8244 or write P. O. Box 488, Appomattox, Va. 24522. It is always a pleasure to hear from you and to help you.

Safety Hint For The Week

Do not store gasoline in your home! Dr. Glen Hetzel, Ag Engineering Specialist at VPI and SU, shares the following safety hint with us. As gas heats in the container, pressure builds up and can cause leaks. Even a spark from a light switch could cause the fumes to ignite. Never ever store gasoline in your home. Gas for lawn mowers should be stored in a metal can in an outside building. Avoid transporting in closed vehicles where dangerous explosive vapors may gather. Cans should be heavy gauge metal, painted red and labeled "Gasoline" in yellow lettering.

EATING WELL

Q. What is hypertension? Does the use of salt cause the disease?

A. Another term for Hypertension is high blood pressure. In all human beings, the blood pressure will vary, going up when we are excited, and down when we rest. However, in some people the blood pressure goes too high and stays that way.

Hypertension may be caused by some other disease which can be treated, and when the underlying disorder is cured, the blood pressure goes down. The cause of the most common type of hypertension is unknown, and many people have it, and don't know it. Some researchers have suggested that a high-salt intake over long periods of time is accompanied with an increased probability of high blood pressure (this has not been proved).

V.A. Questions And Answers

Editor's Note: Following are representative questions answered daily by VA counselors. Full information is available at any VA office.

Q-If a veteran is inearcerated at the time he is scheduled for a compensation exam is his claim disallowed until he can report to a VA facility for his exam?

A-Normally the VA will have a VA physician examine the veteran at the prison or arrange for an examination by a fee basis physician.

Q-I have an opportunity to purchase a four unit apartment building. May I use my VA loan guaranty entitlement to purchase this building?

A-Yes. You may purchase the property on a VA loan provided you meet all requirements and plan to occupy one of the units as your home.

Q-I am receiving a nonservice connected pension. My wife died in June. There have been no other changes in my dependency or income status. Must I report social security paid her up to the time of her death?

A-Yes. However, you should show the cost of her illness and burial if you paid for it yourself. This is an allowable exclusion which serves to reduce your countable income for VA purposes.

IF YOU HAVE ONE DISASTER, DON'T HAVE ANOTHER.

A disaster like fire is bad enough—another due to inflation is even worse. But you can keep up with building costs with our homeowners insurance with inflation protection.

Always something to see in Appomattox. Saturday I saw a squirrel getting in his daily jogging by running atop a midtown cable TV line. Another squirrel takes a daily stroll down Martha Street, doubtless checking out the whereabouts of hidden winter food.

The Virginia State Fair opens Thursday in Richmond for an eleven day run. Do not know if Appomattox exhibitors will have entries, but I do know that Appomattox County made a fine showing in last week's Five County Fair at Farmville. Frank Sweet, Appomattox Extension Dept., was in charge of the swine show, and entries of Appomattox won high honors. County entries fared well in the cattle show, especially exhibitors from Pamplin City. There was a rabbit show and contests in tractor driving, etc. and a fashion show. In each of these events, we salute those who entered exhibits and a verse of Number 88 (Bring Them In) for those who won.

Good Promotion. Hopewell had a "Hooray for Hopewell" event. Why not an "Appomattox Show-Off."

Back in our traveling days, Brightleaf and I had the opportunity to drive around the Gulf of Mexico coast from Panama City, Florida to New Orleans. Every mile a fabulous thrill. I have a modest library and have just read over 400 pages of the known orations of one considered to be near the top of the world's great orators, Demosthenes. He was born in Greece 384 B.C. As I see it, his greatness was not in sheer eloquence, but in practical persuasion. For war, how many men, how many horses, how much food, how much in taxes. Practical leaders are always needed.

Supervisors Set Sights On New Functional Jail

At the Friday meeting of the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors a new jail for the county was the main topic discussed.

Agreeing to a "no frills, functional" concept for a new jail, supervisors discussed the basic state requirements for replacing their 84-year-old facility which the State Board of Corrections has closed as a fire hazard.

Board Chairman, Dr. S. R. Lawson told an architect and a Board of Corrections official that they do not want to build a mansion with frills, woodwork, marble and tile. The supervisors are interested in something functional that will meet the requirements of the state and if they can build it without federal funds they can cut down on costs. Federal jail requirements would add a 40 percent increase to proposed figures.

The Board of Corrections closed the jail Wednesday of last week after the state fire marshall said it did not comply with state safety standards.

The board and Sheriff James E. Richardson knew the facility was atop the list of unfit jails, but two attempts to obtain state or federal funds to aid construction had been denied since 1968.

Lawson said the board had spent more than $20,000 in architectural fees and planning, and insisted that any cost projections arising from Friday's meeting be withheld.

"We prefer to get all the specifications and cost figures and then accept the actual bids," Lawson said, "That's the only way the board is going to determine if we are going to build this thing."

E. L. Paderick, regional manager of adult facilities with the Board of Corrections, and Hal C. Craddock of Lynchburg's Garland M. Gay architectural firm explained their conclusions on a proposed 5,000-square-foot jail, including two dormitory-type cells, six security cells and two special purpose cells, along with the public area and intermediate security needs.

Paderick listed minimum square footage per inmate, recreational and day room requirements and the cell block specifications as the basic state demands, with allowances for work-release prisoners, women and juveniles included.

Craddock next described his conception of the facility, proposed on approximately 2.5 acres adjacent to the court house property.

"We need to expedite this thing...every day we delay, it's costing us taxpayers' money," Lawson said, before Craddock predicted a spring 1980 start.

The present jail could house 13 prisoners. The five current inmates have been transfered to Charlotte County while the 45-day Board of Corrections order is in effect.

A Circuit Court judge may issue a permanent closing order within that time, if not, a public hearing must be held by the Board of Corrections.

In other action, the board endorsed an Overall Economic Development Program prepared by the county's OEDP committee, with help from the Central Virginia Planning District Commission.

The plan, including many facets of the county's master plan required by the state, lists its objectives as maintaining the county's rural atmosphere while increasing employment opportunities with new, compatible industries.

Proposed projects within the plan include new water storage and sewage treatment facilities for the Town of Appomattox, a new water system for the Town of Pamplin and the Holiday Lake 4-H Center, improving industrial sites and conducting a tourism feasibility study.

The report indicated travelers in Appomattox County spend less than in all other Virginia counties, despite the National Historic Park.

Also, CVPDC's Ted McCormick told the board the county's unemployment rate was approximately 3.2 percent, lower than the state average.

In other action, the board also passed a resolution supporting the Appomattox By-pass design discussed at a recent public hearing.

Mr. James E. Bowen, Superintendent of State Forests, presented the board a check in the amount of $22,238.95 representing one-fourth of the proceeds from the Appomattox-Buckingham State Forest, the portion that goes to Appomattox County.

Bobby Gene Monigold was hired as Animal Warden for the county.

He was educated in public schools in Queens, New York, attended high school in New Jersey and was a graduate of the University of Chicago, where he was president of his junior and senior class. He was listed in "Who's Who in American Colleges."

Autumn Begins September 23

When the center of the sun crosses directly over the earth's surface at 11:17 a.m. (EDT) on September 23, fall will begin.

"From that moment on September 23 until the beginning of spring," Dr. Paul H. Knappenberger, Jr., director of the Science Museum of Virginia, explained, "the sun will be south of the equator, providing less heat in the northern hemisphere."

Only twice each year, on the first day of autumn and the first day of spring (usually March 21), does the sun rise due east and set due west. On these two days the periods of daylight and darkness are nearly equal to 12 hours throughout the world.

School Board Members Began Year With Active Session

The Appomattox County School Board began the school year with an active session on Wednesday, September 12, 1979. Beginning at twelve noon, Board members had lunch at the Appomattox Primary School. After lunch Mrs. Patricia Terrence, Appomattox Primary School principal, explained to the board a program which is in operation in the school this year for children between the ages of two and four. Board members observed this program in operation and became familiar with its objectives. The program is part of the special education program of the county school system.

At the Appomattox Elementary School, board members were given a tour of the facility by the principal, Mr. Terry Quesenberry, and a review of a program initiated this session for emotionally distrubed students. At the present time four students are being served. Three of the students were unable to attend the public schools in Appomattox last year.

Before board members returned to the School Board Office for the regular meeting at three o'clock, they observed the improvements made at the Appomattox Middle School stadium. It is anticipated that the improvements at the stadium will enable spectators to have a clear view of activities and to have ready access to a very adequate concession stand. The school board is very appreciative of the interest and efforts of the Appomatox County High School Boosters Club and many citizens of the community who have raised the funds and constructed the concession stand.

During the regular session the superintendent reported to the board that a concerted effort by school officials had resulted in all children who are in school having begun the series of immunizations. Reports of physical examinations are on file or there is assurance from the parents that the reports will be filed with the schools very soon.

School personnel will continue to monitor records of students to assure that each child has on file a report of a physical examination by a licensed physician and a report that the child has been immunized against measles (rubeola) and German measles (rubella), diptheria, tetanus, whooping cough and poliomyelitis.

In other business, the board took action as follows:

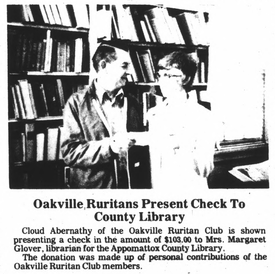
Approved pay for teachers of home bound instruction at $6.00 per hour;

Approved adult classes for fall semester;

Approved a request for use of the Appomattox County High School by the Appomattox Junior Woman's Club, Inc. on Saturday, March 26, 1980.

Approved a request for use of the Appomattox County High School parking lot and locker room shower facilities on October 13 and the Appomatox Middle School stadium on October 14 for special activities as a part of Appomattox Railroad Festival;

And set the next meeting at 7:00 p.m. on Tuesday, October 9, 1979.



Oakville Ruritans Present Check To County Library
